Super Duck #35

Dec. 1950

What we have here is an obnoxious cast of funny animal characters screwing each other and themselves over.

Lot's of "Haw Haw!" (you know--the universal sound effect for a jack-ass laughing at the misfortune of someone else)

I like it

(and if I remember correctly, R. Crumb mentions Super Duck as an influence)

Burt Lancaster Turn A Flip To Philosophize

After executing a casual, yet very graceful acrobatic backflip, Burt Lancaster philosophized as follows:

"Muscles don't make an actor, but they sure help.

"I don't say that I wouldn't have become an actor without them, but it would have been a slower process, and I'd never have been able to play my latest role."

He was referring to "The Flame and the Arrow." In it, the former circus trouper enacts a hero described as part Robin Hood, part Tarzan, part William Tell and partly the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., an assignment requiring more muscular prowess than anything this side of Samson.

Lancaster recalls that his very first picture made muscles absolutely necessary. He played the role of a prizefighter in "The Killers," and for much of that drama he was seen in the ring walloping assorted opponents.

After that, he went into "Brute Force," the very title of which made it imperative that he have bulges under his sleeves. In "Desert Fury" he was a cop, and cops without muscles would be pretty inadequate cops.

"So that's what I mean," Lancaster concluded. "Muscles have helped make me what I am today. Without them, I'd have been a parlor or bedroom hero, which isn't half as much fun."

When Lancaster speaks of "fun" he means sequences like the climactic one in "The Flame and the Arrow," wherein he scales walls like a human fly, leaps from building to building and from balcony to balcony, and duels himself into a mass of bruises—all to obtain that final clinch, and luscious kiss from the lips of his leading lady, gorgeous Virginia Mayo.

Famed Director Disagrees With Shakespeare

Gordon Douglas, of Cinemaland, is becoming as famous for his sartorial nonchalance as he is for his directorial talent, which lately has been rated, authoritatively, as second to none.

In spite of the fact that he owns a pretty swell wardrobe including 35 suits, 18 pairs of shoes, 300 neckties, etc., he invariably does his directing in — faded blue denims, sandals, and a T-shirt.

He says that he likes to be comfortable while he's working, that he can't think good in a collar, and that he doesn't agree with Shakespeare's contention that "apparel oft proclaims the man."

"I love action pictures like that," he said, "and I love to show actors how I want a scene played. I may have to lie on the floor, or wrestle a behemoth, or jump through a window, or fall off a horse. So I wear old clothes, and it doesn't make any difference. I'd be much less active in a $200 suit, and my pictures might not be so good."

Although he wears only denims while directing, Douglas doesn't stint himself on them. He has 22 sets of them, with T-shirts and sandals to match.

"I'm particularly hard on agents," says ducers about directing a picture, the pro-Mr. Douglas. "When they take me to see producers usually look all around me trying to find the director the agent is talking about. They think I've come to fix the telephone, or something.

"Someday, though I'm really going to dress up on a set. I'm going to wear a hat."

Strange Phobia

Dick Jones, 23, now portraying an heroic, death-defying plainsman with Errol Flynn in "Rocky Mountain," is desperately afraid of—bathtubs! He "drowned" in one when he was 12 years old, and he probably never would have regained consciousness if a pulmonary squad hadn't happened to be working just across the street on a woman suffering from a heart attack. As it was, his heart was beatless for at least five minutes. He has been taking showers, exclusively, ever since.

Some Do, Some Don't

It happened that the big clinch scene (romantic, that is) between Gary Cooper and Ruth Roman for "Dallas," was filmed on location in San Fernando valley on one of the year's hottest days.

Cooper, a veteran of hundreds of outdoor pictures, kept cool between scenes by drinking hot coffee, and he tried to get Miss Roman, who was rapidly wilting, to do likewise.

"When I was a young man in Montana, which is a very hot state," he said, "I found that hot liquids produced perspiration and cooled me off quickly."

Miss Roman said, "Humph! And when I was a girl in Boston, which gets very cold sometimes, I drank hot tea to keep warm!"

Whereupon he ordered another cup of coffee, hot, and she asked for another glass of ice water, with the result that Cooper enjoyed their romancing a lot more than she did.

Real Friends

Star Burt Lancaster's heroic friend in "The Flame and the Arrow" is portrayed by Nick Cravat, his real life pal for 26 years. They did an acrobatic act in circuses and vaudeville for eight years, and were boyhood cronies in Gotham's Upper Eastside.

Film Career Nixed For Famous Pooch

Steve Cochran isn't going to let his famous mongrel dog, Tschaikowsky, be ruined by a career in the movies.

"He's an awful ham," the actor explained, "and the offers are tempting. But I just can't take the chance of letting a good dog be spoiled!"

Tschaikowsky has been sought for at least three fine roles since several newspapers and magazines have featured photos of him doing his notable tricks, such as playing the piano (by ear, of course) and fetching cigars for his master. Cochran has owned the dog since its puppyhood.

Mr. Garfield Beamed

Screen star John Garfield says he got the compliment of his life while doing some location scenes for "The Breaking Point," at Balboa, Calif.

A couple of natives passed him on the street, and he heard one of them say: "That man is almost a dead ringer for John Garfield, only better looking."

JOE BUSH is the name of a "green man" in the gardening department at Warner Bros. "Green men" make gardens on the sound stages for movie settings. Caretakers of the studio grounds are just plain gardeners.

Add Humble Starts

Kirk Douglas was a punch-press operator, parking lot attendant, semi-professional wrestler, bellhop, waiter and usher before he made good as an actor.

Oh, No!

Zachary Scott, the deep-eyed, two-gun and very vicious villain of Technicolor western epic, "Colt '45," was once a teacher of English in a Texas school—for girls!

Take an ordinary cardboard shoebox or candy box and cut a 3-inch "screen" in it (A). Cut out one of your favorite comic strips and put a continuous strip of "Scotch" Cellophane Tape across the top and another across the bottom (B), leaving about 1" overlap on each end (C). Roll the comic strip up on two pegs (D) long enough to stick out at the sides of the box. Then cut four holes (E) in the sides of the box and insert the pegs with the rolled-up comic strip through these holes as shown. Rotate the pegs to the left and watch the "film" move across the screen!

Send for your copy of "Tricks with Tape", new booklet full of interesting playtime ideas. Write Dept. AC-90, Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co., St. Paul 6, Minn., enclosing the plaid tab from a roll of "Scotch" Cellophane Tape.

CUBBY

THE BEAR in "The Hero"

LATER ON SECOND THOUGHT MAYBE I OUGHT TO GIVE THIS SOME MORE CONSIDERATION, AFTER ALL, WHY BE HASTY ABOUT IT!

YEAH, AND IN THE MEANTIME THAT FIREMAN PUTS OUT ANY SPARK PETUNIA MIGHT HAVE LEFT IN HER HEART FOR YOU!

POLICE EXAMS GIVEN INSIDE

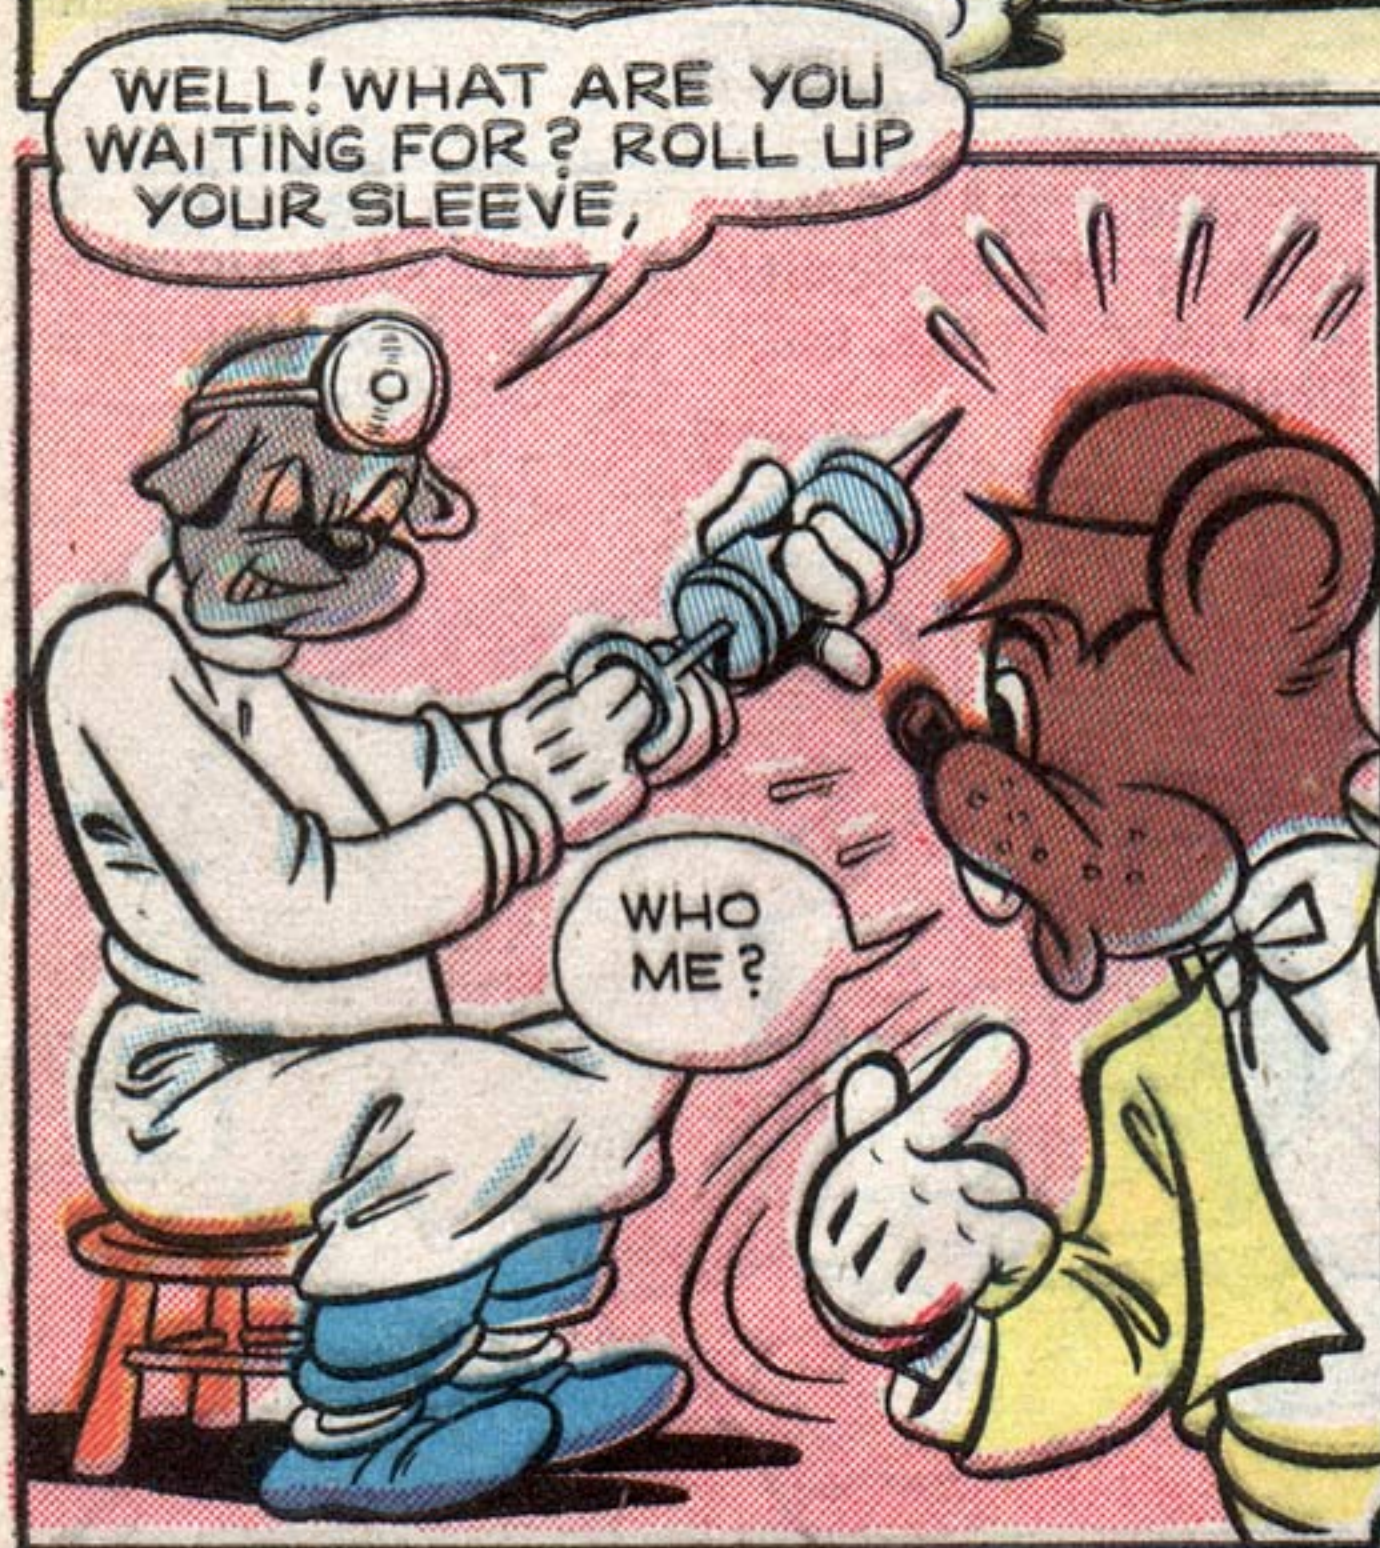

CHEER UP UNCLE CUBBY-YOU DON'T HAVE A THING TO WORRY ABOUT! I'LL BE BEHIND YOU ALL THE WAY!

A LOT OF GOOD THAT'S GOING TO DO ME!

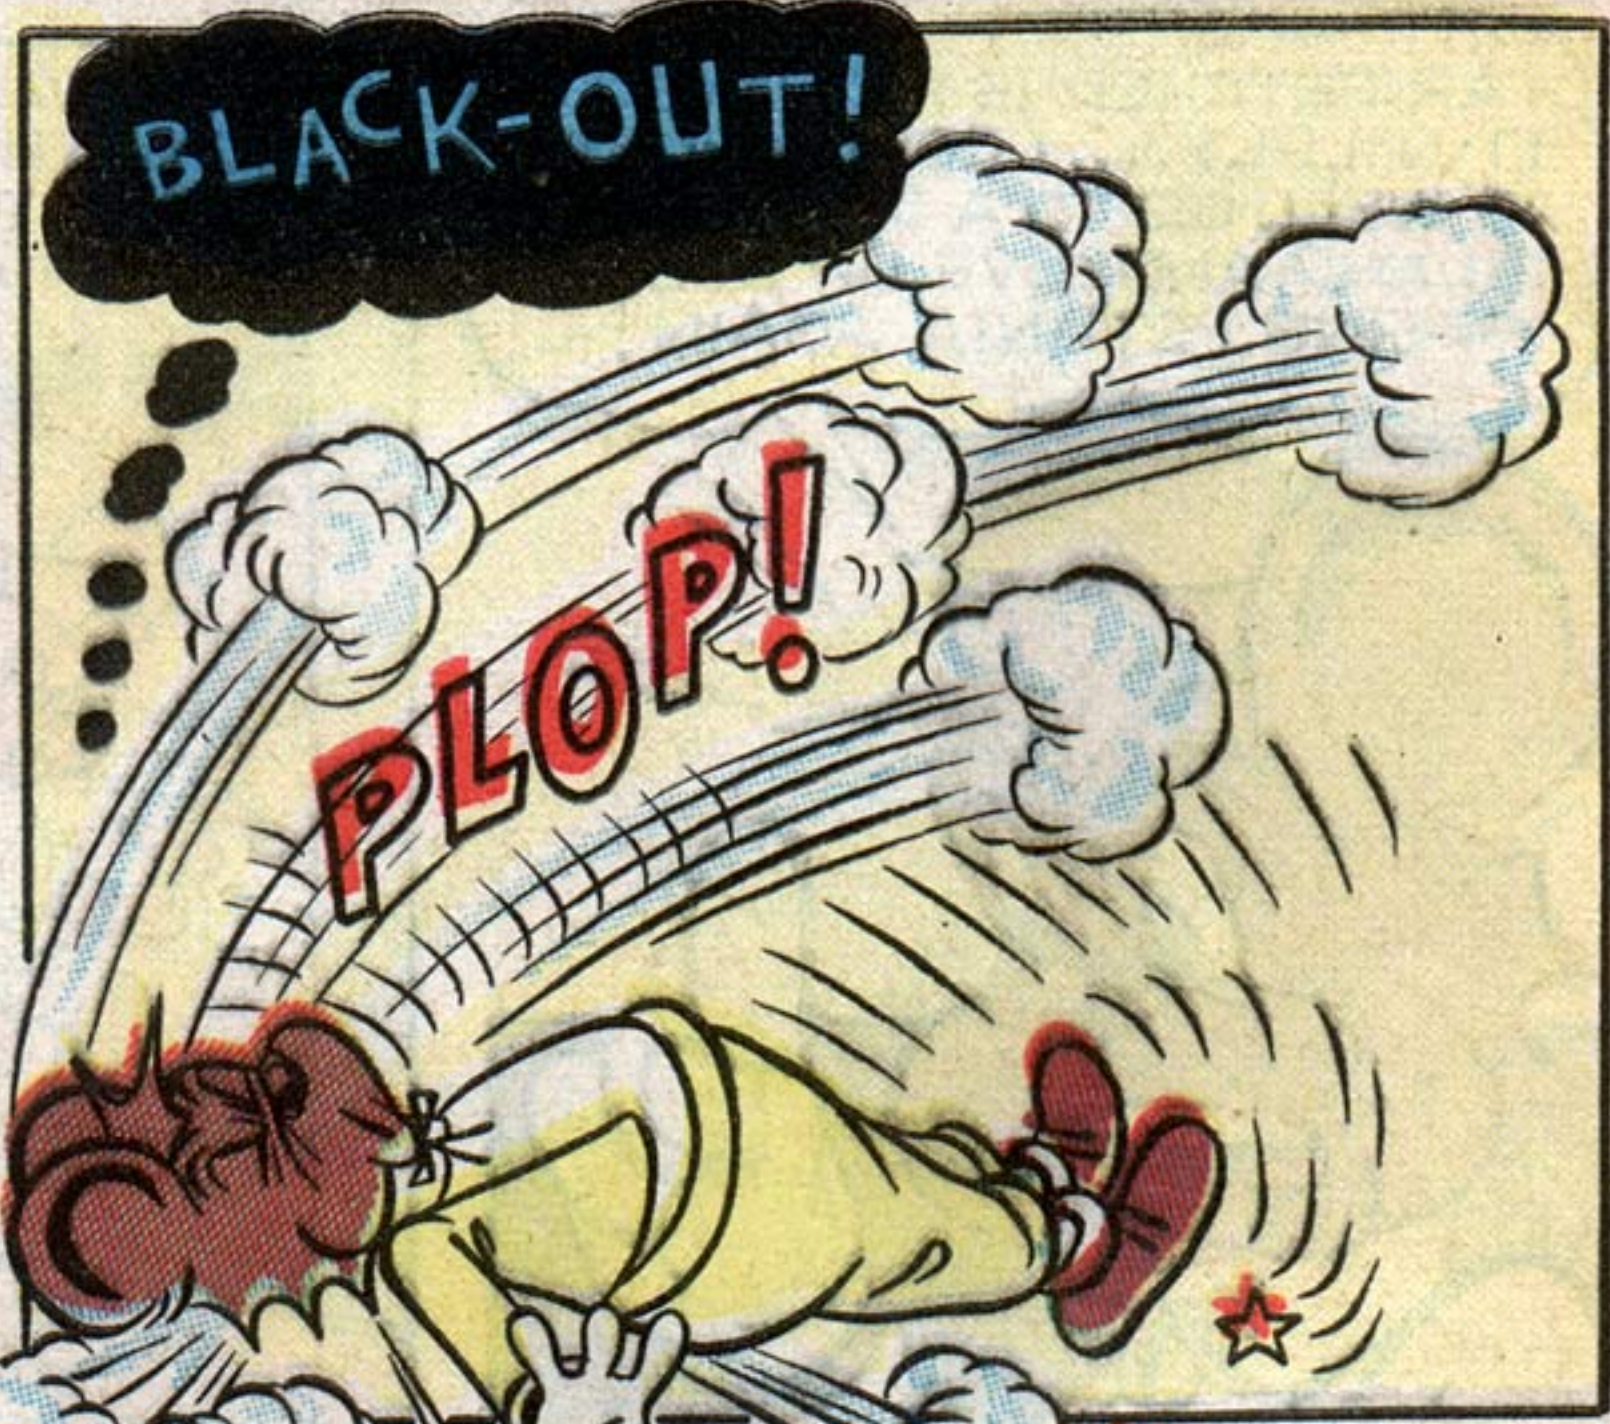

NEXT!

GULP!

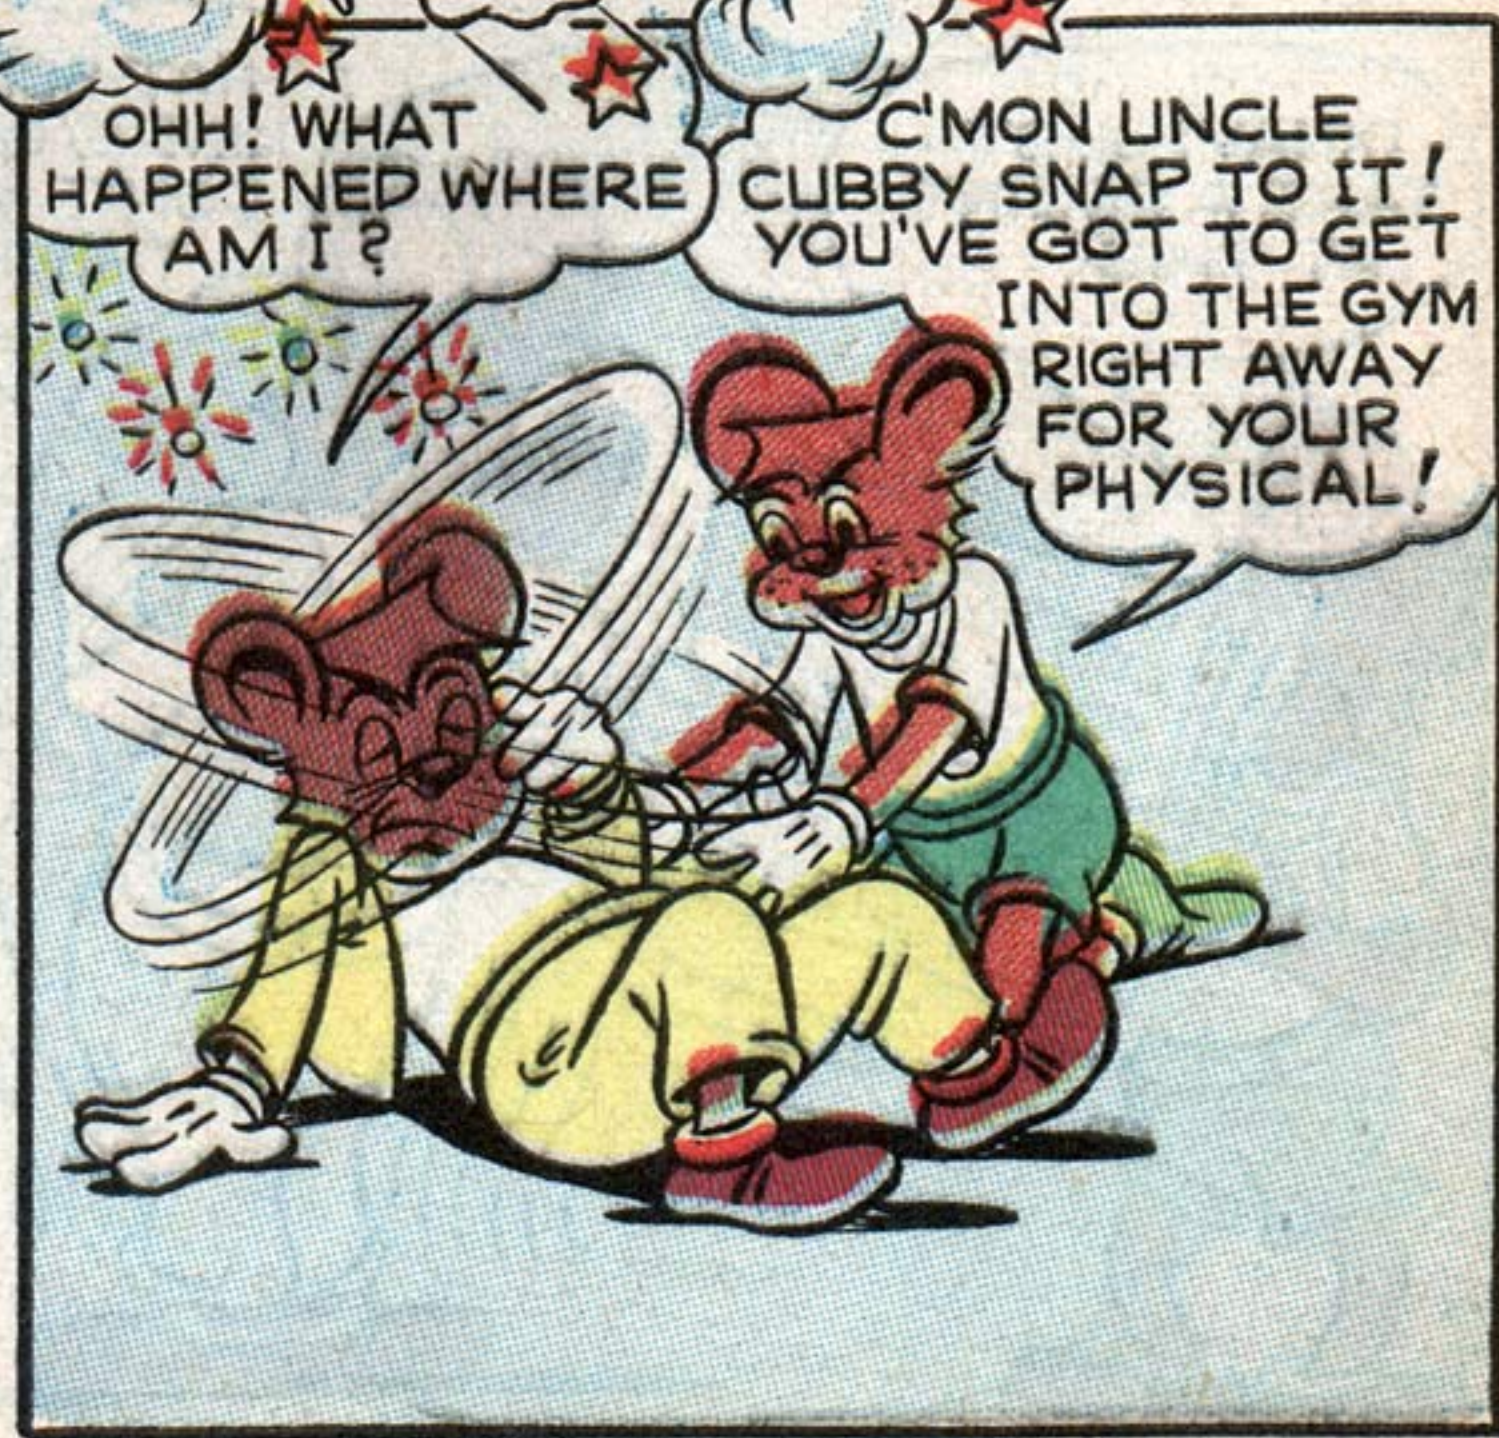

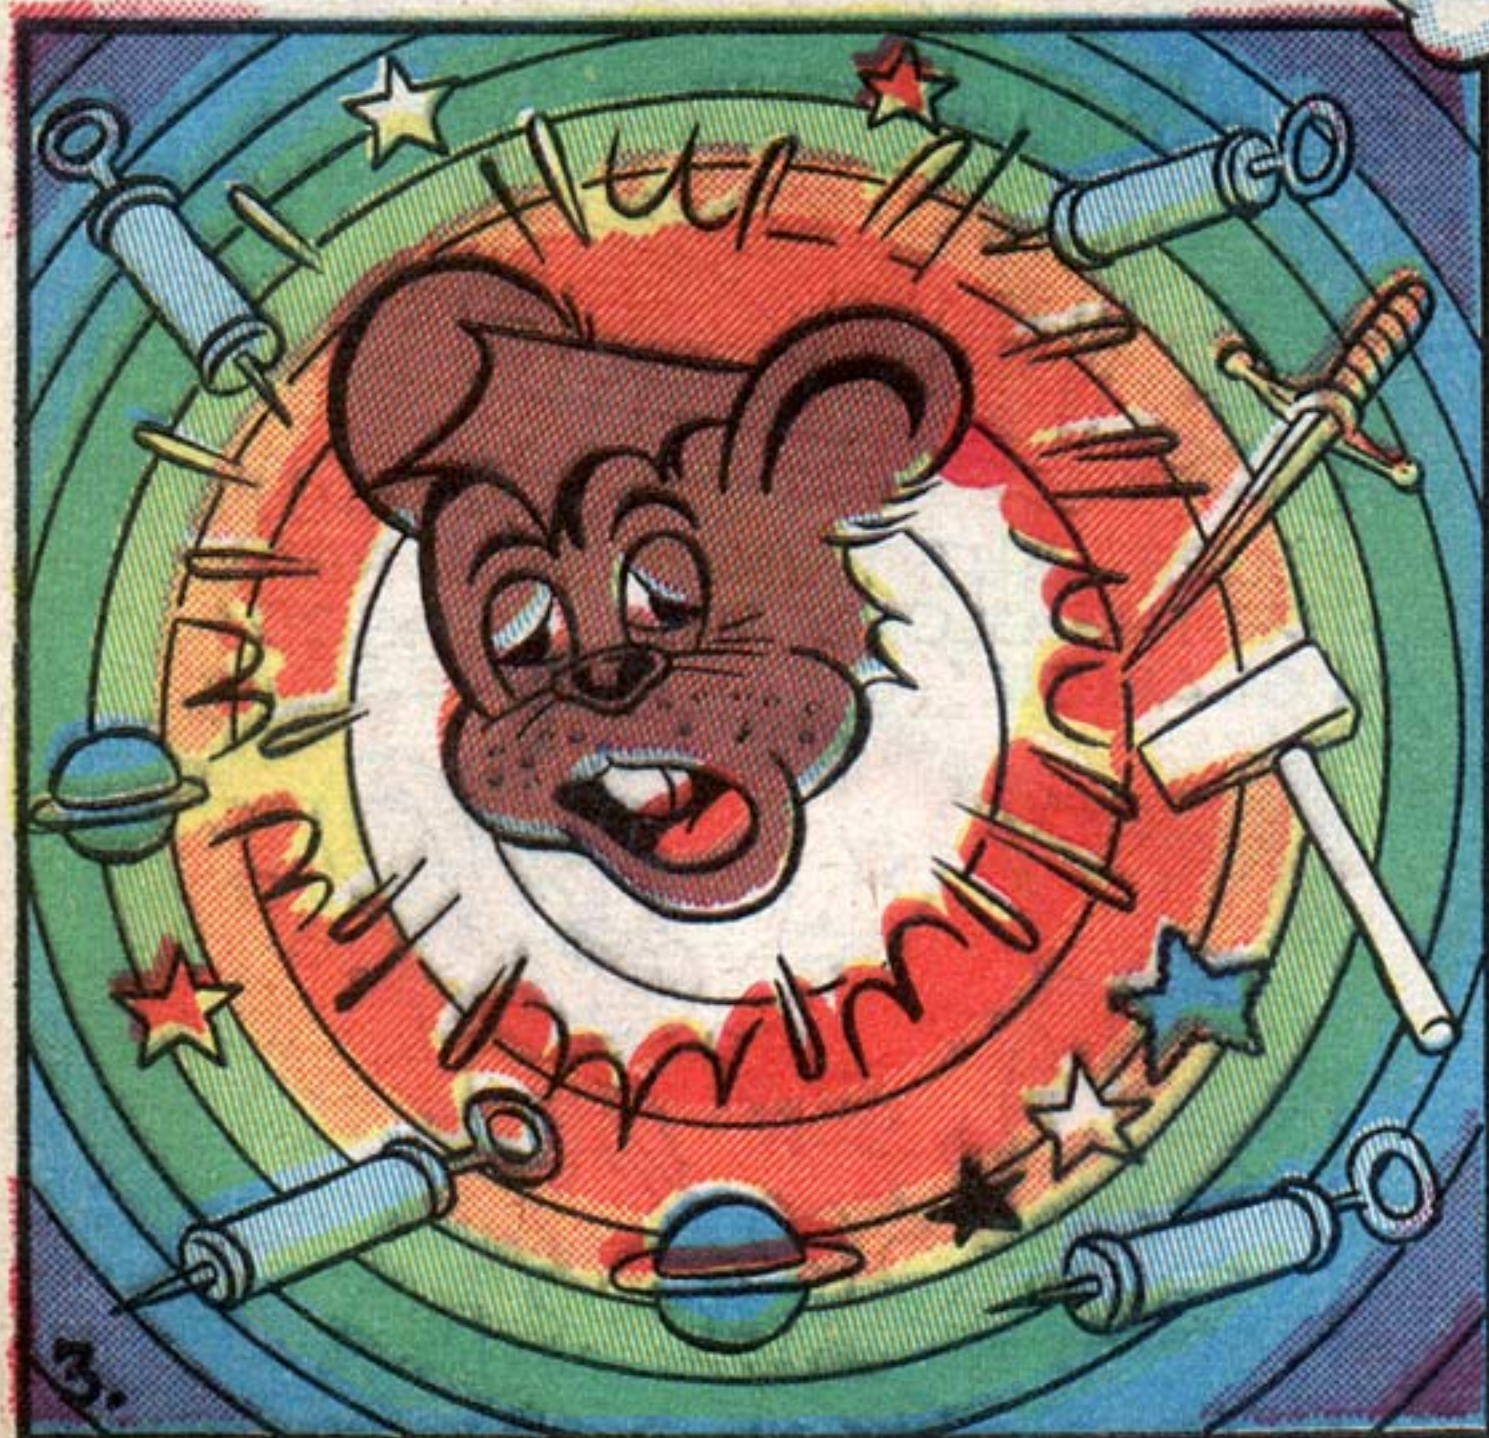

WELL! WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR? ROLL UP YOUR SLEEVE,

WHO ME?

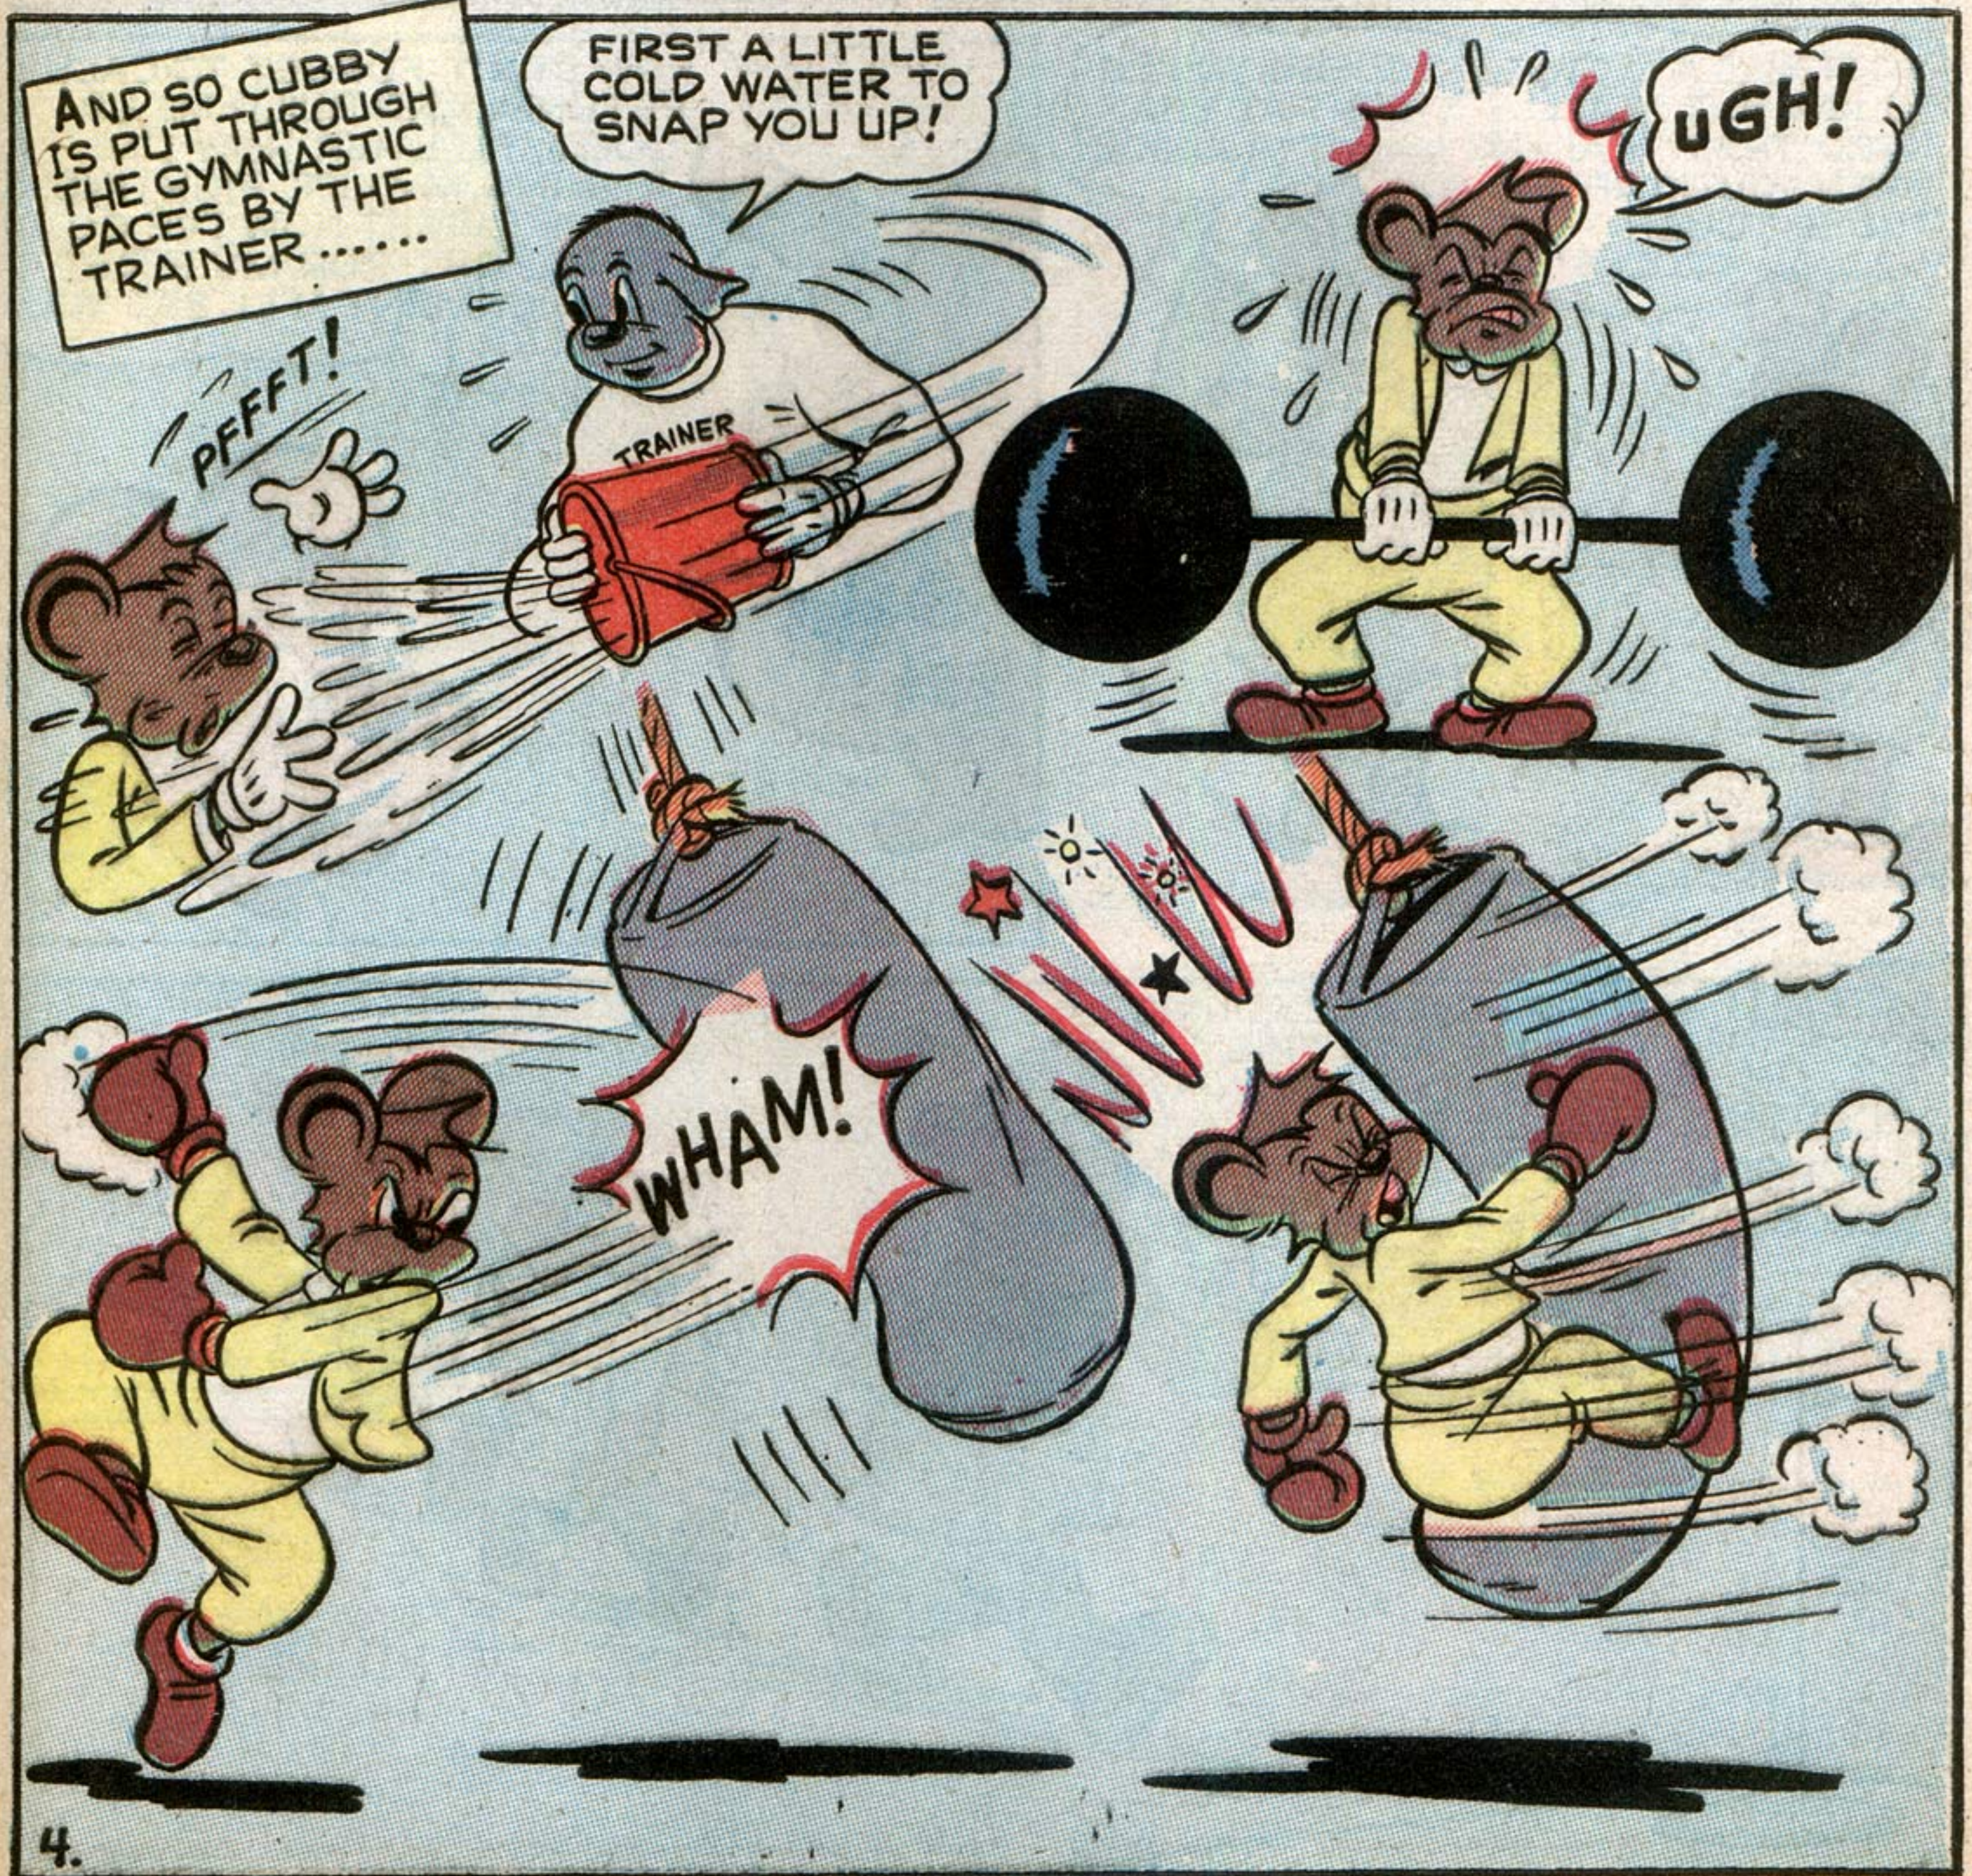

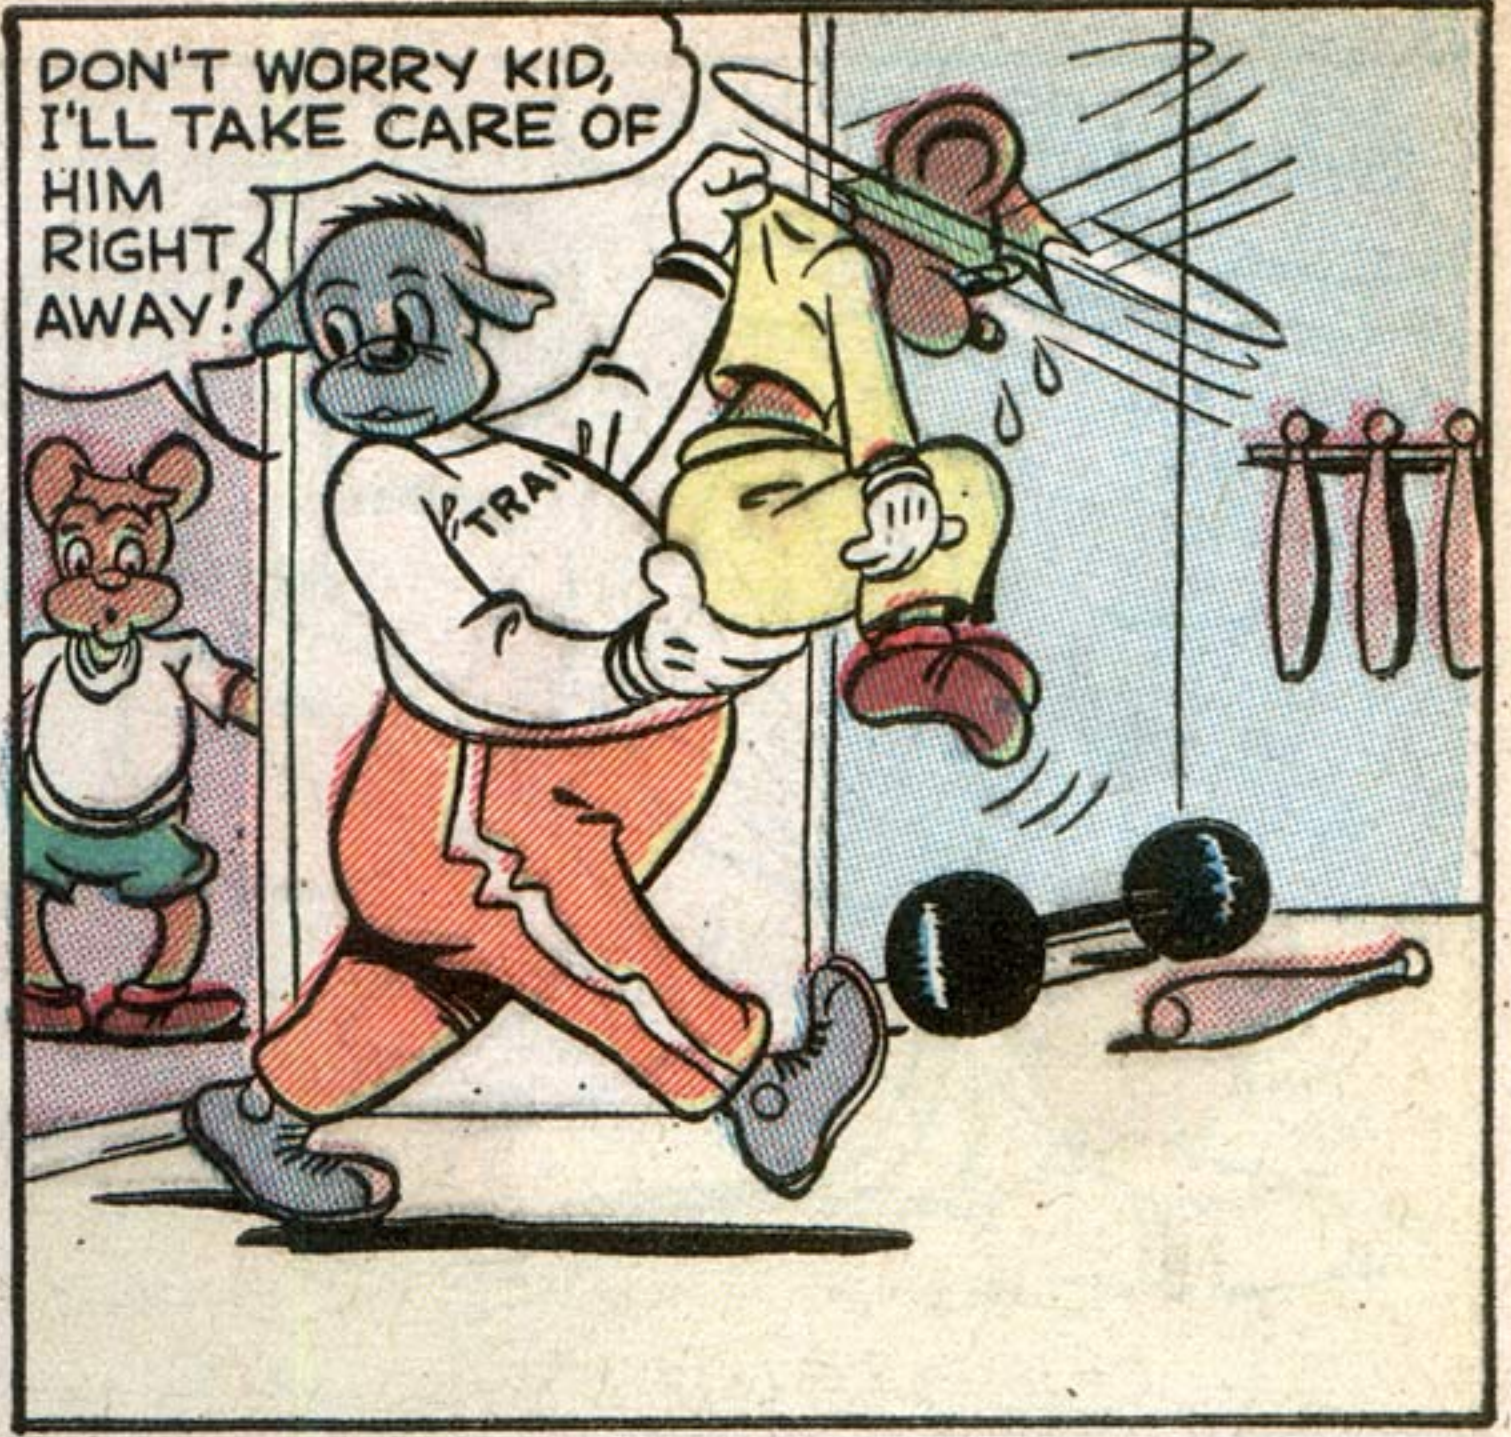

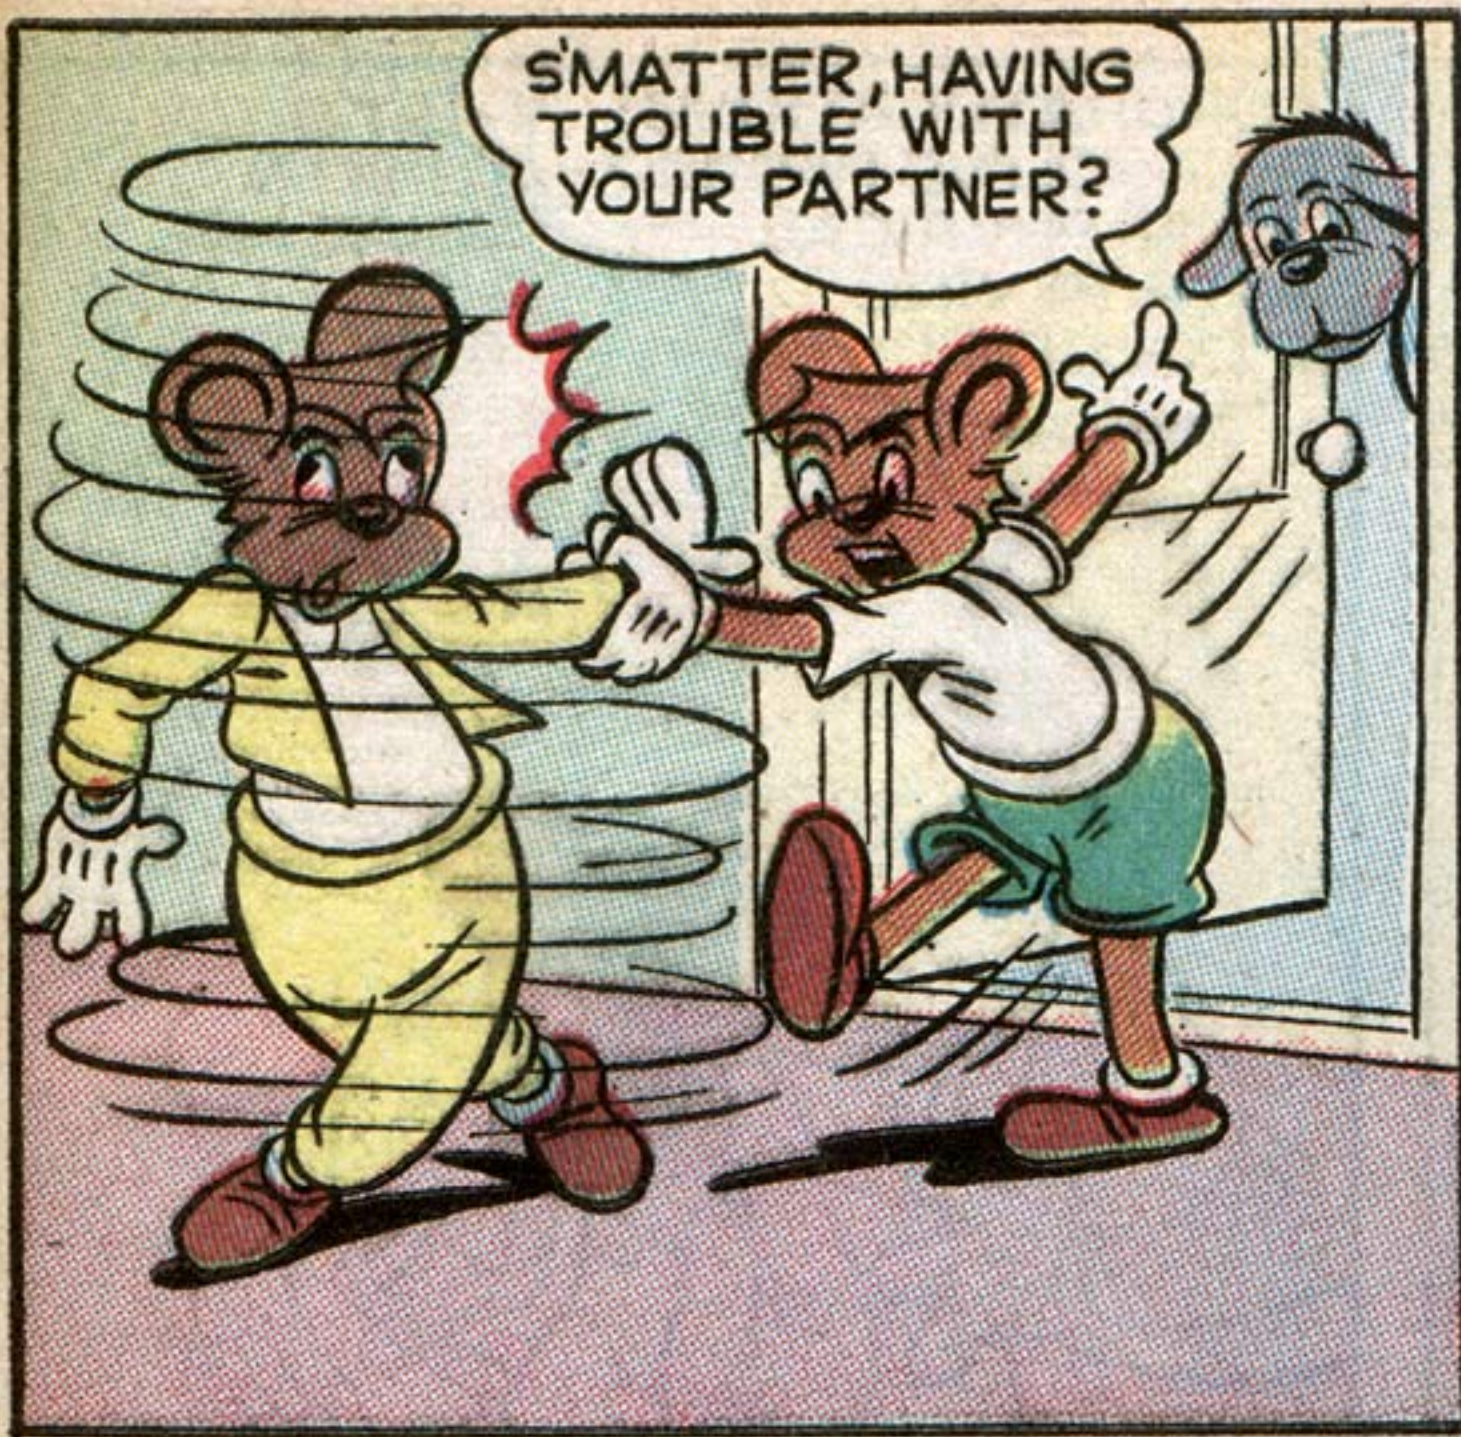

BLACK-OUT!

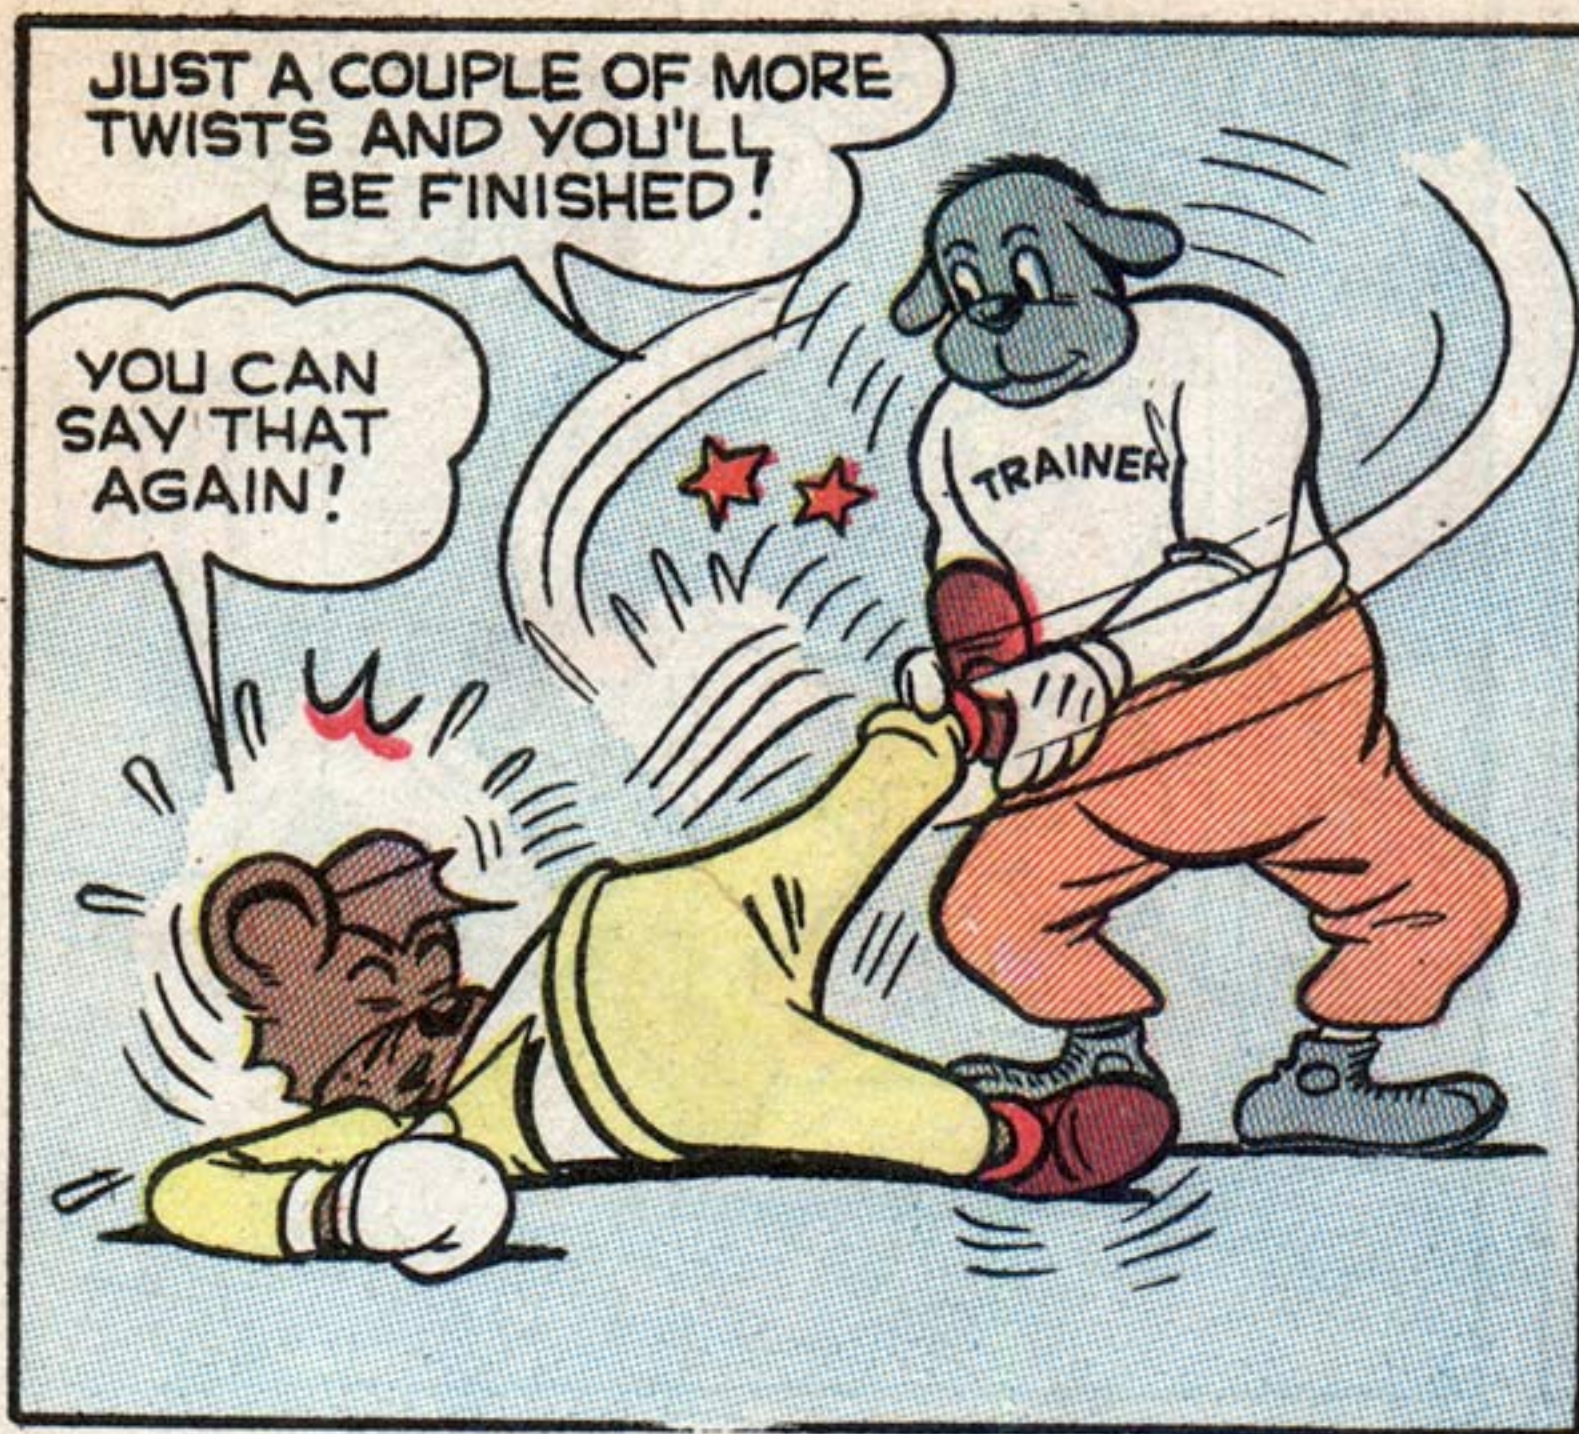

PLOP!

OH! WHAT HAPPENED WHERE AM I?

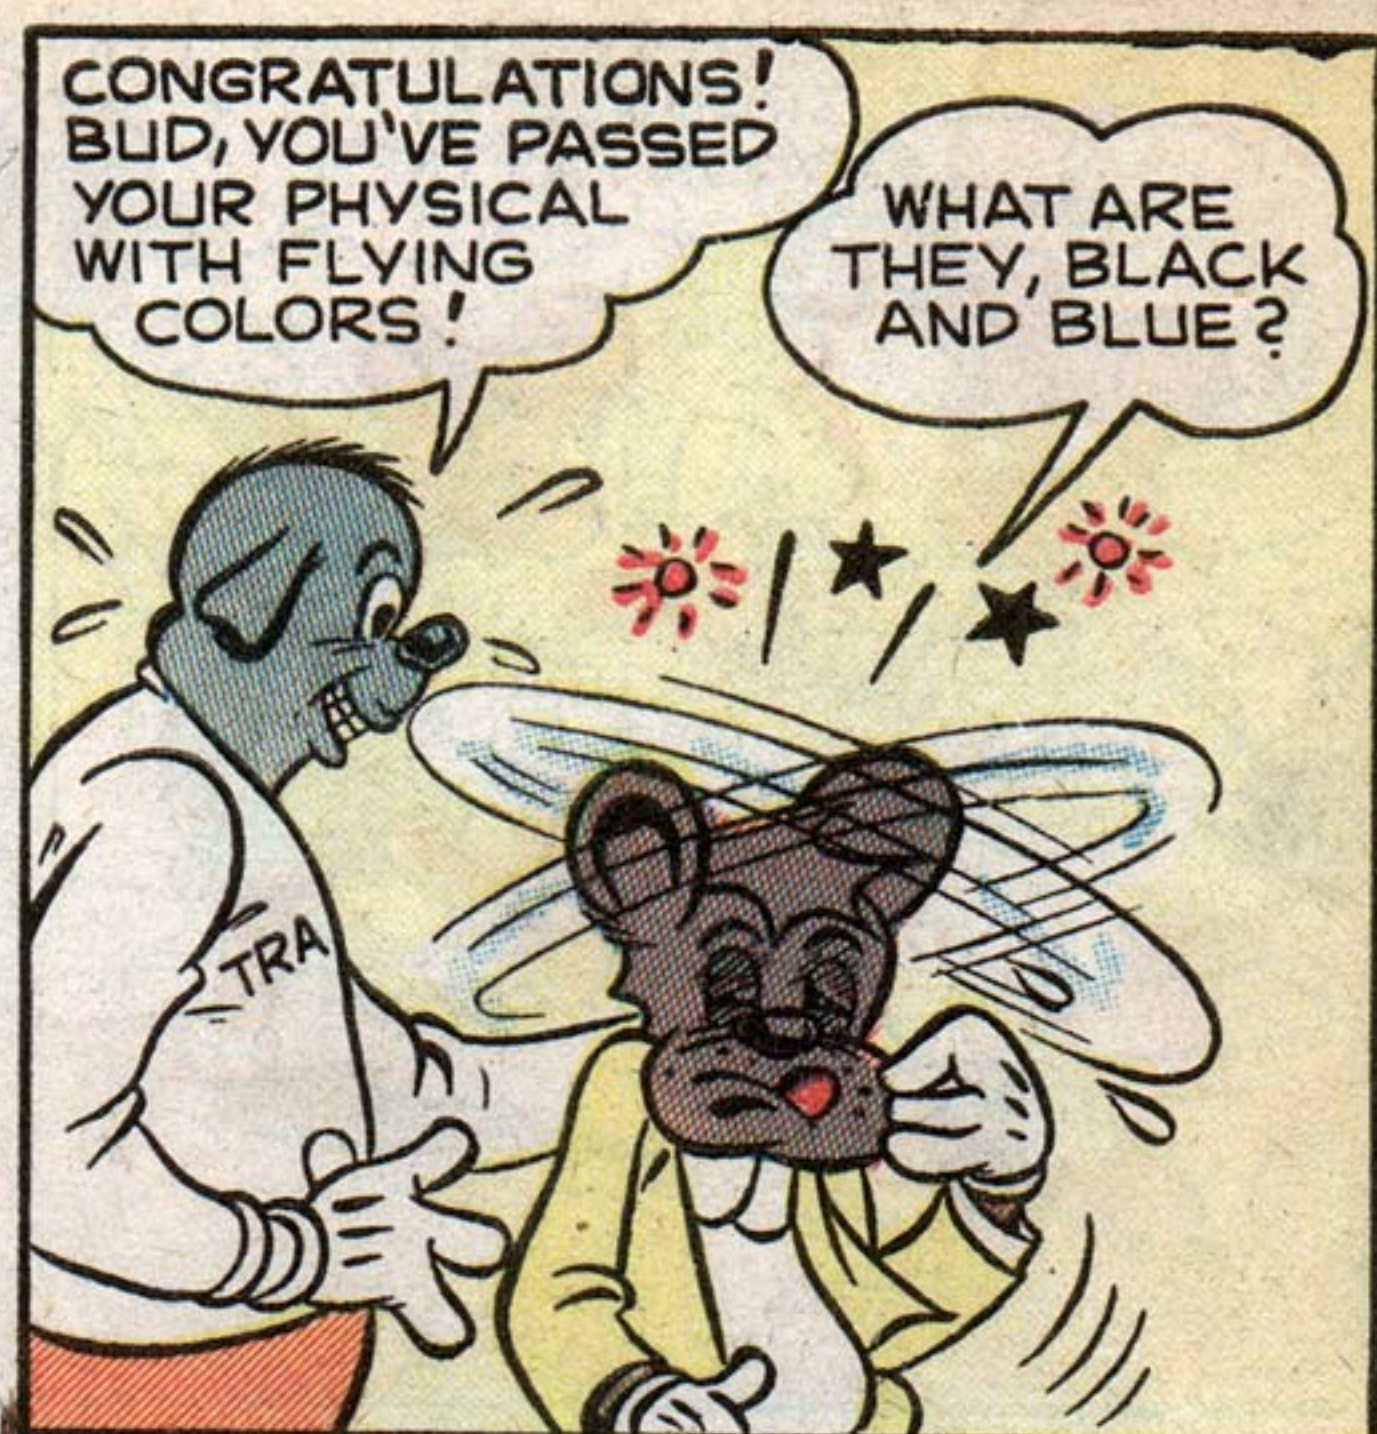

C'MON UNCLE CUBBY SNAP TO IT! YOU'VE GOT TO GET INTO THE GYM RIGHT AWAY FOR YOUR PHYSICAL!

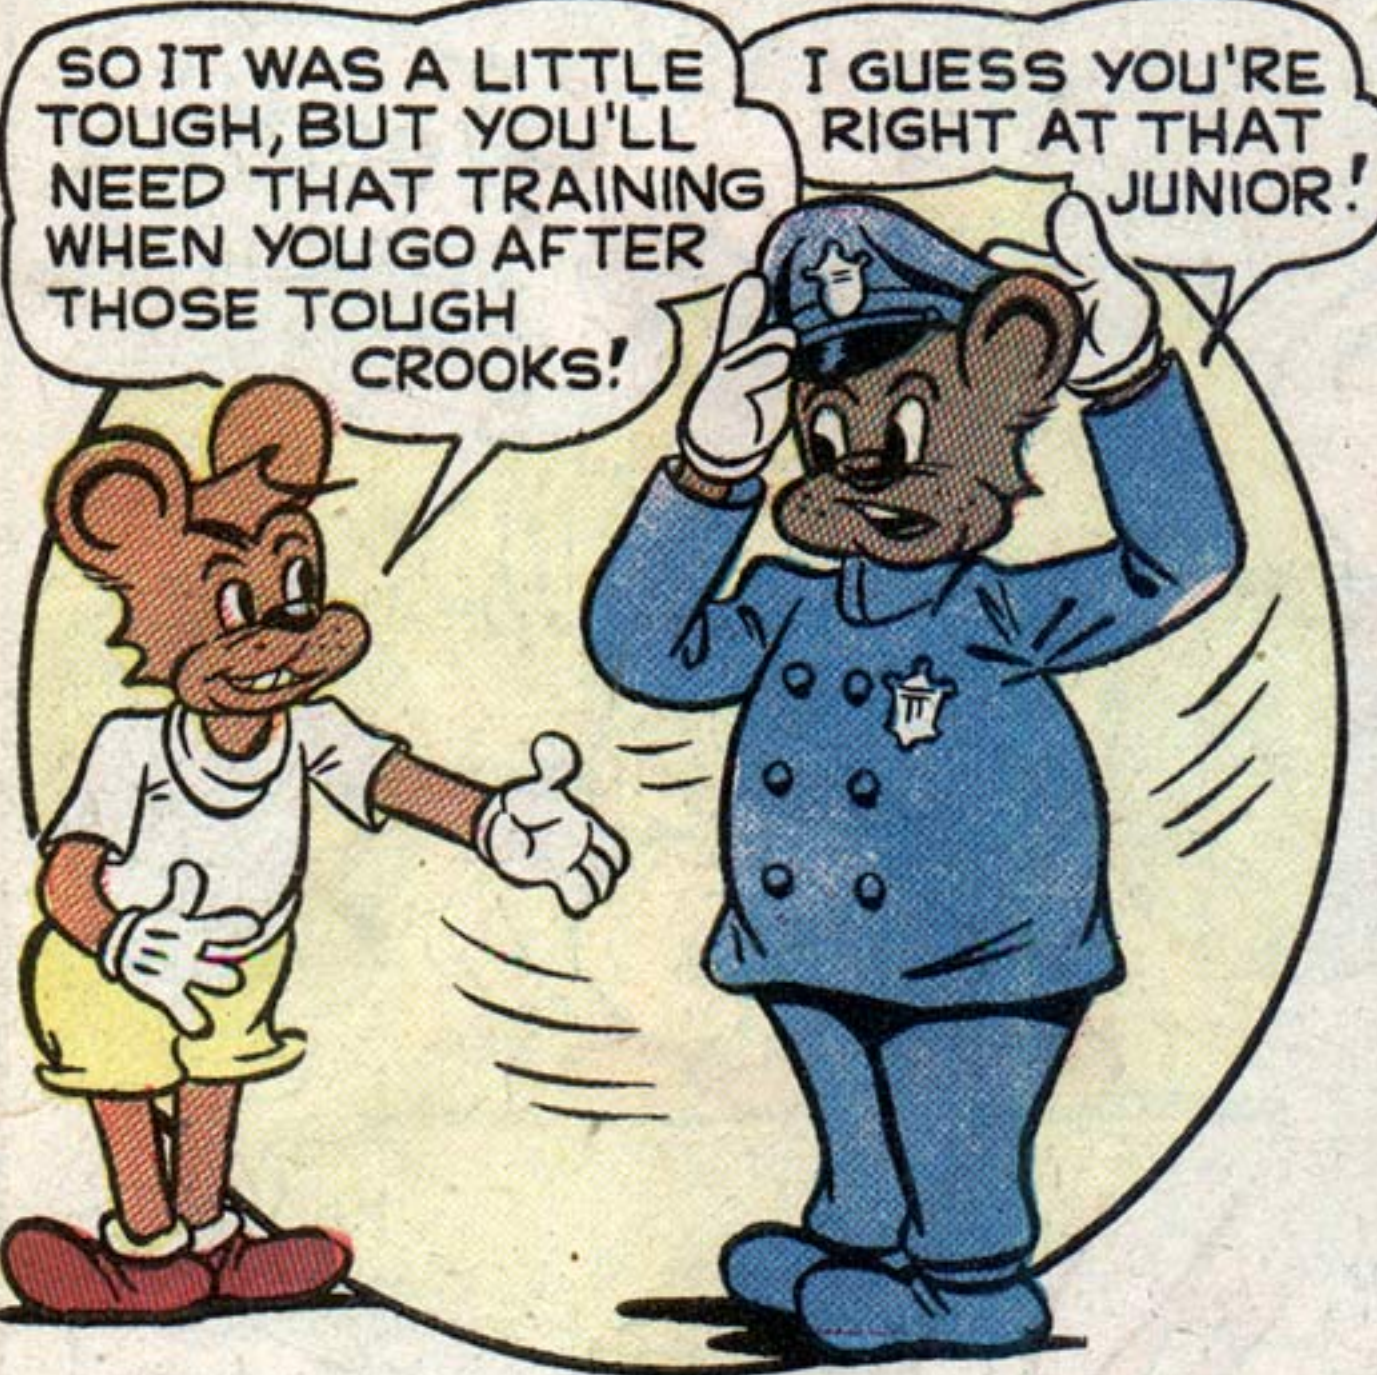

JUST A COUPLE OF MORE TWISTS AND YOU'LL BE FINISHED!

YOU CAN SAY THAT AGAIN!

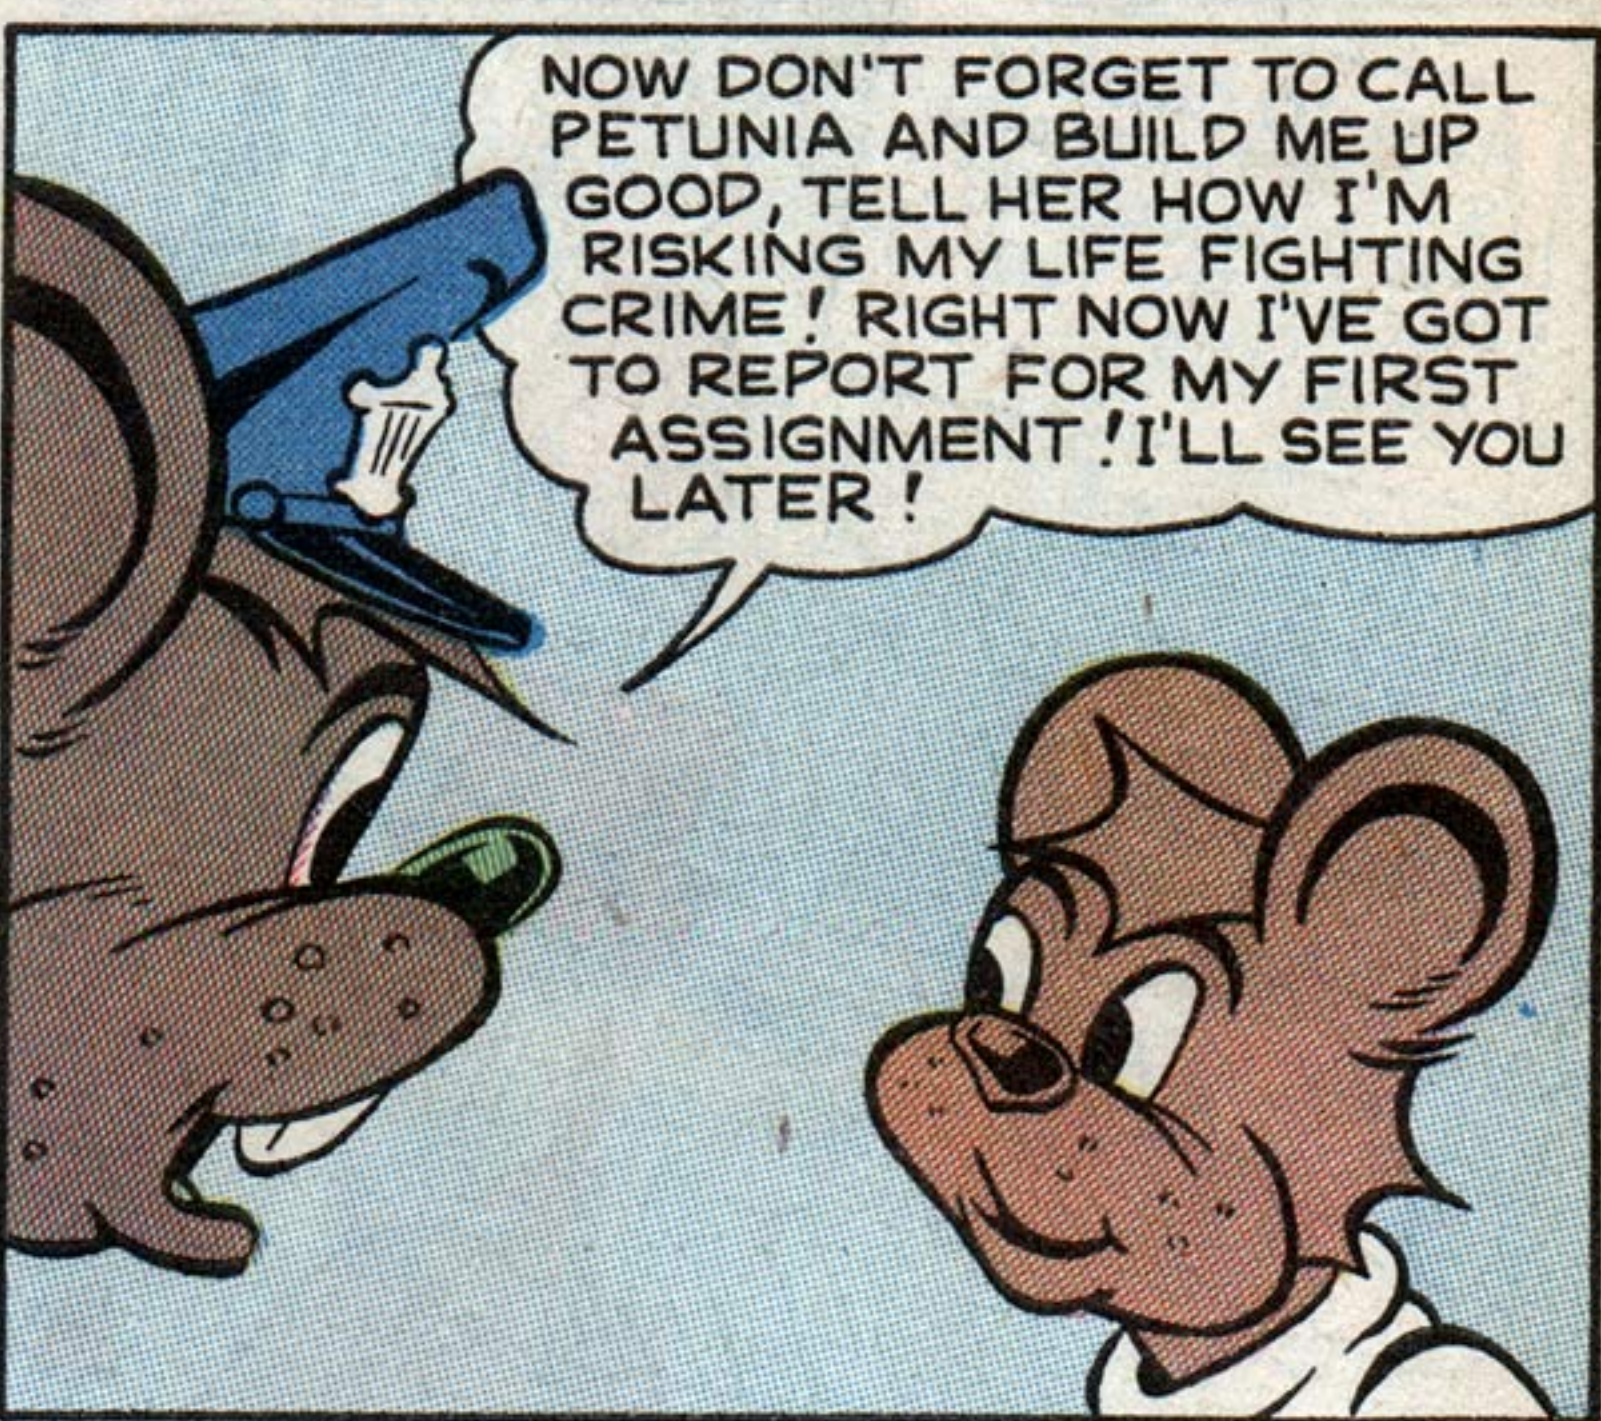

CONGRATULATIONS! BUD, YOU'VE PASSED YOUR PHYSICAL WITH FLYING COLORS!

WHAT ARE THEY, BLACK AND BLUE?

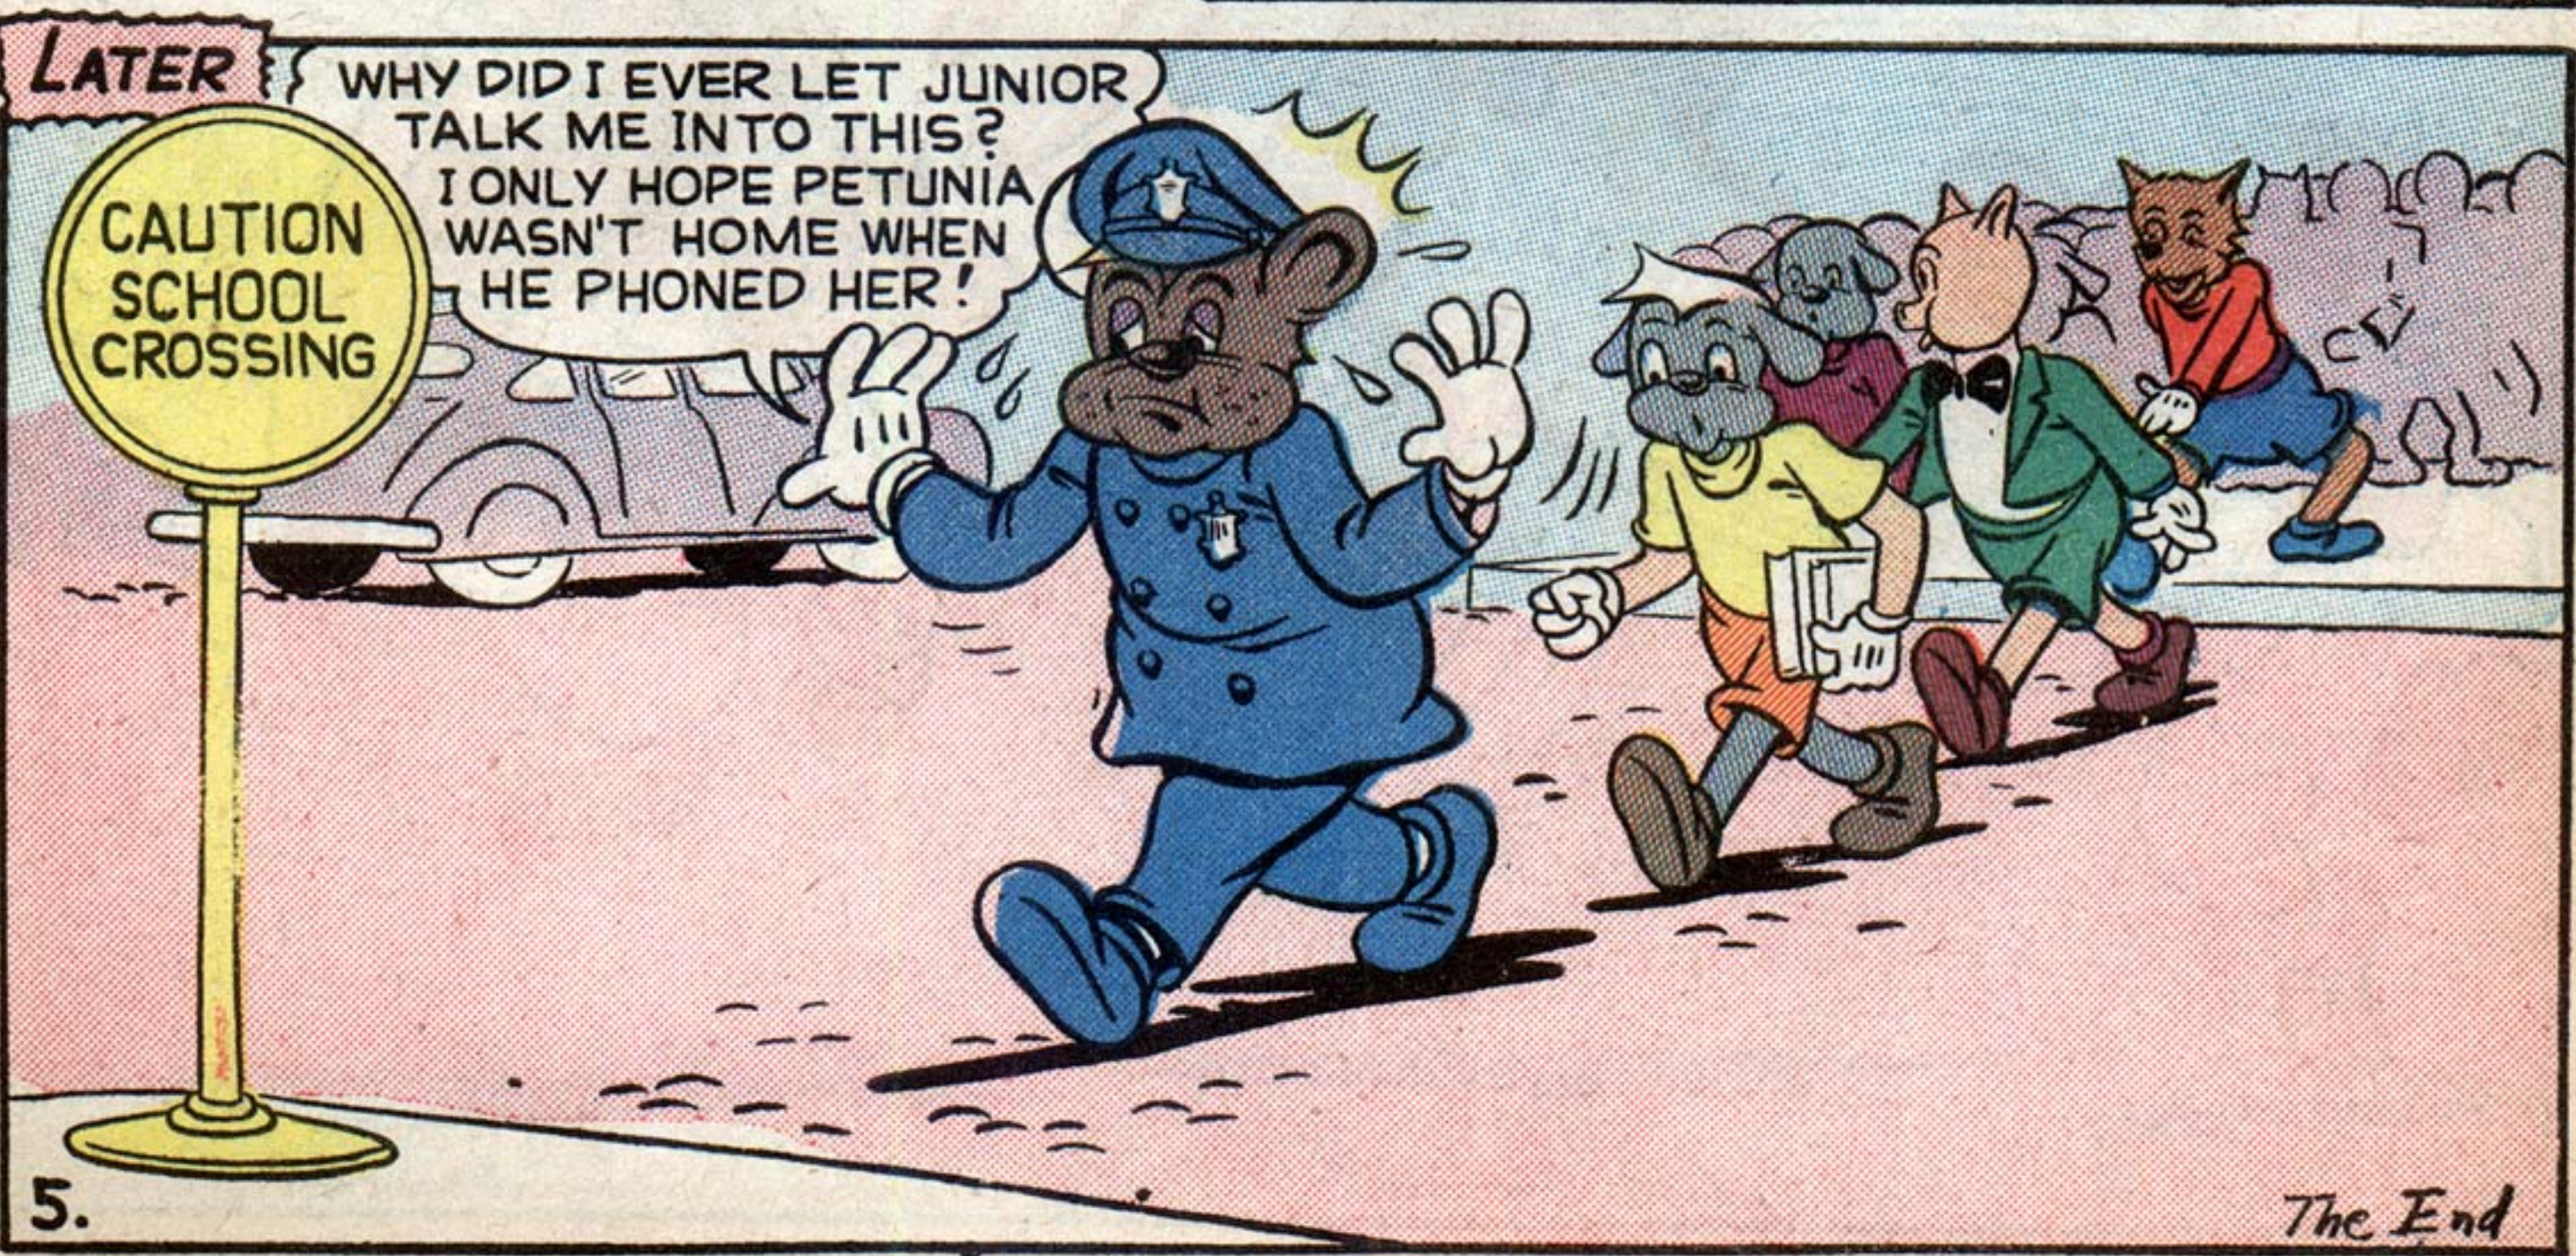

SO IT WAS A LITTLE TOUGH, BUT YOU'LL NEED THAT TRAINING WHEN YOU GO AFTER THOSE TOUGH CROOKS!

I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT AT THAT JUNIOR!

NOW DON'T FORGET TO CALL PETUNIA AND BUILD ME UP GOOD, TELL HER HOW I'M RISKING MY LIFE FIGHTING CRIME! RIGHT NOW I'VE GOT TO REPORT FOR MY FIRST ASSIGNMENT! I'LL SEE YOU LATER!

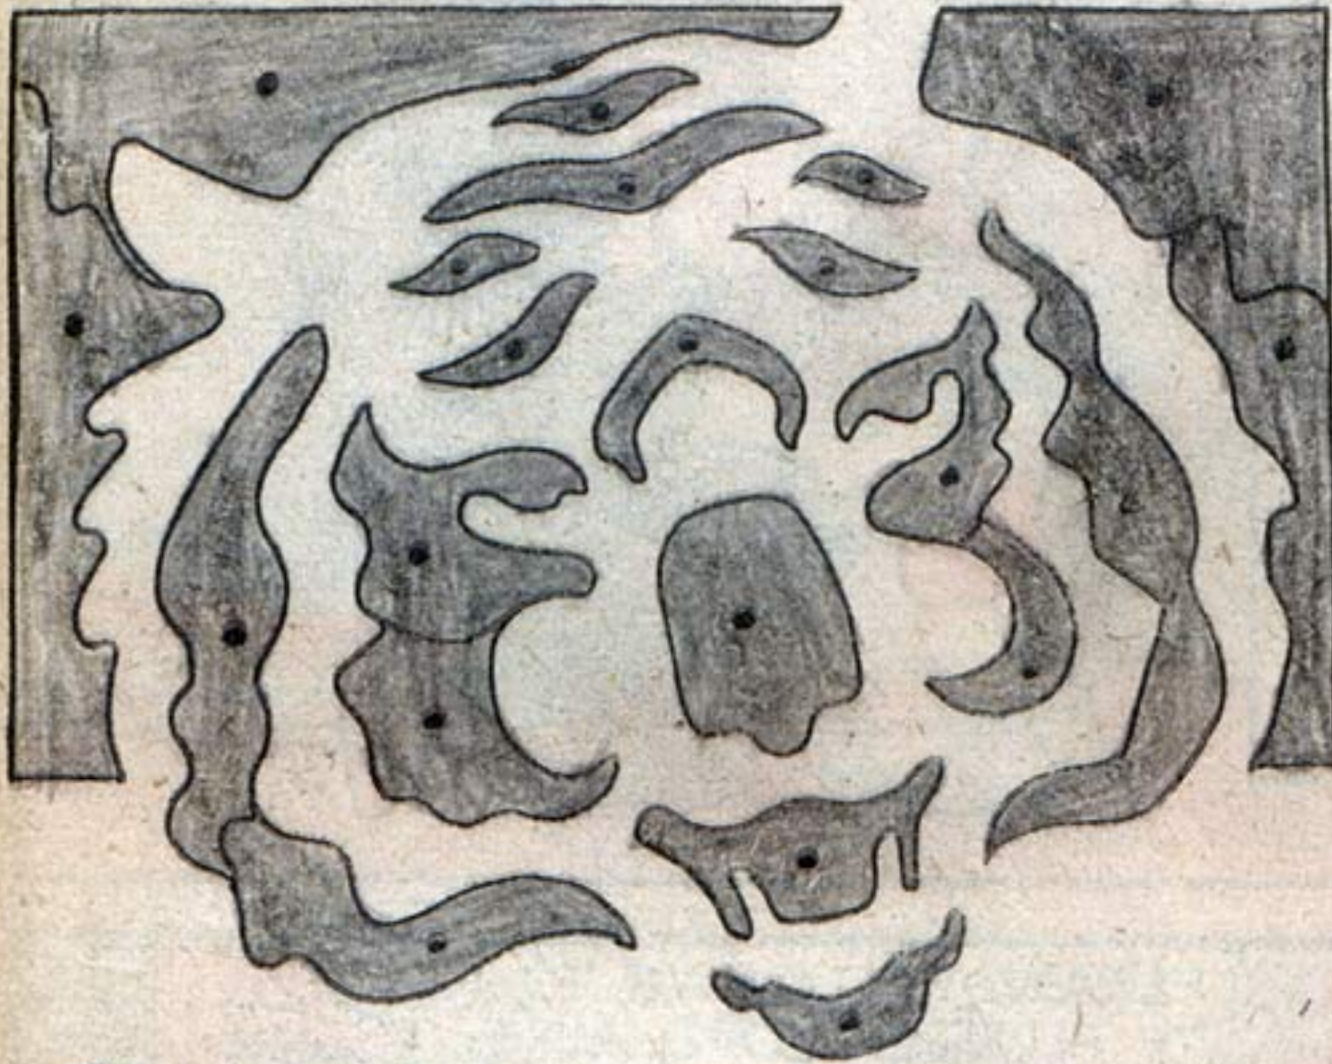

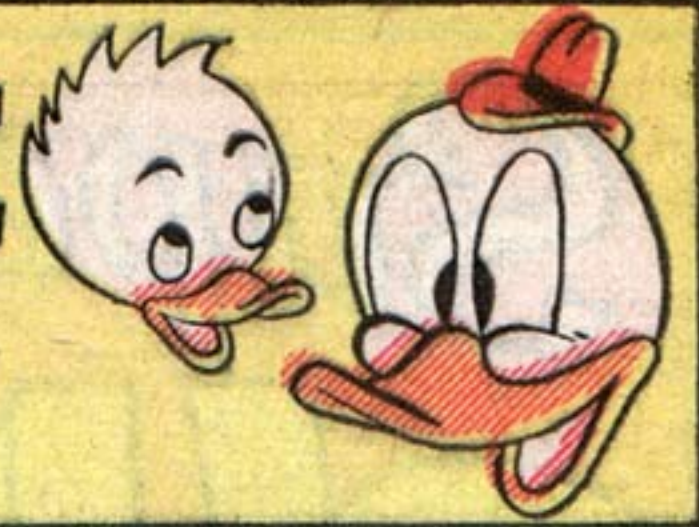

LATER

WHY DID I EVER LET JUNIOR TALK ME INTO THIS? I ONLY HOPE PETUNIA WASN'T HOME WHEN HE PHONED HER!
